This World Edition is a work in progress that features the ‘Best of Africa’ past, present and future. It contains items from the family of nations that comprise the UN Sub Region of Central Africa: Angola, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo, Congo (D.R.), Equatorial Guinea, Gabon, Sao Tome and Principe.

Further editing and fine-tuning remains to be done on this project prior to its final presentation, with Embossed Souvenir Covers and a DVD for dignitaries. Low resolution photos and maps will be replaced. Our editorial team will increase the number of pages on most of the destinations, adding new sections to the issue in the coming months. To honor past Ministers of Tourism and celebrate our magazine’s 14th Anniversary as a proud partner of the Africa Travel Association, items from the archives are included. These advertisements and articles serve to tell the history of our partnership. This example is in Electronic format, however many of these same pages will be appearing in print as a magazine, a DVD or a book in the Africa Travel Library.

We are also proud of the effort made to extend the magazine’s reach through face-to-face promotion at trade shows and a variety of events in North America, Africa, Europe and Asia. Our VENUES WORLD EDITION will showcase such activity prior to, during and following each event.

AIR HIGHWAYS TO CENTRAL AFRICA
An important element in this and all of our regional World Editions, is an area where we have had much experience and success. It involves the role of air carriers and airport management. Starting in the early 90s with the Open Skies program in North America, we developed a working arrangement with our Department of Transport and printed what we called a Supermap of Air Routes. This map also became a magazine enclosure and was in great demand. In 2010 we will be taking part in the Routes World Airports Convention in Vancouver, Canada. For that important event, we will publish a special edition in which Africa will play a major role. Having staged the Air & Marine Tourism Expo, Air Highway Days and Africa Road Shows, our management continues to team up with the Africa Travel Association at many events across North America, Africa and beyond. AFRICA FASHION is a huge issue with our magazine and consistently scores #1 on Google. Other topics to be added are airlines, airports, land and sea transport, city profiles and a contacts directory. Many items from our ‘Electronic Editions’ will appear in one or more of our printed issues. I am Cameroon, Africa in One Country, famous for festivals such as Ngondo. Douala, my largest city with over 2 million inhabitants, has hosted two major events sponsored by the Africa Travel Association since 2001. During post tours, ATA members had many opportunities to sample the hospitality and feel the true spirit of the people. Nowhere was this feeling more evident than in Douala during the Ngondo Festival, a spectacle unlike anything you have ever seen in Africa. Annual festivals and gala events abound throughout West Africa, but this one tops them all as a simply outstanding spectacle that has deep spiritual significance. Having read Wilbur Smith’s great book “The River God,” concerning life on the Nile and Blue Nile in ancient times, I have been keenly interested in the rivers of Central Africa and the mysteries they hold. In this case, the Wouri River, focal point of the Ngondo Festival in Douala, has its own River Gods, it’s a ceremony involving the “water spirits,” who communicate their message in an unusual way.

Ngondo Festival River God
For starters, one could not have asked for a nicer day, as our delegates descended from the Ministry’s tour buses and the ATA members took their seats in a specially reserved, tented area. Speaking of the weather, this occasion was typical of most days during our month long stay in Cameroon, deep blue skies, puffy cotton candy clouds, and just the right measure of sun shine to make it comfortable. This was one of my biggest surprises, perhaps being located on the Wouri River, 24 km (15 miles) from the Atlantic Coast is the reason. In a coming edition we will write at length about this great event and why its story is so significant in the local customs and culture. There are many more other reasons to visit Douala, and from here, you will enjoy good transportation links to all of Cameroon. Contact us anytime: mailto:africa@dowco.com. Douala, Cameroon’s largest city, main hub for air travel and industrial center is located on the Wouri River, a few miles from the Atlantic Coast, with its tourist attractions such as Kribi and Limbe. Mount Cameroon, Africa’s second highest peak, is also within a few hours’ drive from Douala. The landmark Hôtel Akwa Palace, located in the city center, is an ideal meeting place with its popular terrace. Nearby is the Musée de Douala, located in the hôtel de ville (town hall), featuring Bamoun and Bamilélé craftwork. Visitors can purchase artifacts at Artisanal Camerounais, an open-air crafts market. The city is 120 miles west of Yaoundé, Cameroon’s capital. While Douala is not the capital of Cameroon, it is the most significant city in terms of population, and the economic role it plays in the overall economy. It is said to be named after the Douala, a black African ethnic group that originally settled in the area. The chief commercial center, Douala has an airport and extensive docks, and is a terminus for two railway lines extending into the interior. Industries include the manufacture of aluminum products, beer, soft drinks, textiles, and the processing of timber and cacao beans. Douala’s port handles some 95 percent of the country’s maritime traffic. This article is continued on www.africa-ata.org/cm_douala.htm Above photo by Muguette Goufrani. Africa Travel Magazine.
If you dance, you vibrate - and he who vibrates lives.”

Mount Cameroon, West Africa’s highest peak, stands like a giant sentinel, gazing out over the Gulf of Guinea on Africa’s Atlantic Coast. Among it’s legendary names is “Throne of Thunder,” a fitting tribute to the powerful gods that are said to inhabit the mountain’s inner core. Our group of ATA members and journalists approached the ‘throne’ shortly after one of its frequent volcanic eruptions, and the ribbons of cooled lava resembled grey frosting oozing from an enormous layer cake. The lava beds are evident from the main highway to Kribi and a hiking trail winds up and over them. The warning signs advised us to pay respect and to tread gently in this eco-sensitive area.

Mount Cameroon is the crown jewel of a chain of volcanic mountains strung like a giant pearl necklace along the shoulders of the Cameroon Nigeria border. This vast range stretches from the seacoast to the northern plains at Maroua, gateway to Waza National Park. Each February the popular ‘Course of Hope’ attracts aspiring climbers to the area and we’re told that, while the ascent is challenging, it’s not dangerous or overly strenuous. Many other sights would amaze and impress us that day and in the week to follow. So much to see and do

Speaking personally, this trip was by far the most complete tour of any ATA-African host country I had experienced to date. At its conclusion most travelers in our group were tired - and somewhat bedazzled - yet I enjoyed a feeling of solid accomplishment. As a result I will never forget Cameroon and always hunger for more. Cameroon’s Minister of Tourism, Hon. Pierre Helé, puts “ecology first” in his country’s efforts to win an important share of the tourist trade from North America and other markets we hope to target for his ministry. Road to Economic Success

But its not Mile Zero on the road to economic success - this progressive country is already high on the preferred list in terms of business travel. Scan the financial pages, or dig a little deeper in the Internet, and you’ll see what I mean - the country is rich with potential in terms of agriculture, forestry, marine life, minerals and natural resources. And a word to the wise, “Where business goes, tourism flows” - and vice versa. Europeans discovered long ago what most North Americans have yet to learn - that Cameroon is a Tourism Mecca in the raw. Ministry officials such as our tour leader Ebenezer Elimbi agree with the popular expression that their land is Africa in One country.” In other words Cameroon is a little bit of everything, or as my Grade 9 Spanish textbook said in its title, “de todo un poco.”

Cruising the Countryside

Our escorted bus trip through the hills, plains, valleys and coastline of Cameroon was quite similar to taking a small ship cruise or a personal rail tour. Why? - it provided whistle stops, combined with extended visits, photo opportunities and overnight moorings.

Ports of call on this ‘amazing land cruise’ from Yaounde and Douala, included Edea, Kribi, Limbe, Buea, Bafang, Bandjoun, Bafoussam, Bamenda, Bangangte, Bafia, Bafut, Foumban, Bafia, Maroua, Pouss, Mokolo, Rhumsiki, Mora and Waza National Game Park. Sounds like a heavy duty schedule - right? Well, the surprising thing was the fact that in spite of all the cities, towns and villages mentioned, nothing was the same. In other words, when they say “Africa in One country” they mean exactly that, as we discovered in a way that you could never do by flying .Africa’s Doors of Hospitality

Whether the roads were smooth and broad or rough and dusty, there was always something new and interesting to look forward to. Our overnight stays on the North-South tour were at Yaounde - Kribi - Douala - Limbe - Bamenda - Maroua and Waza, and while the accommodation was varied I would recommend all the hotels selected to our tour operator friends.

Africa in One Country: Cultural Mosaic
and Ecotourism Paradise

Cameroon’s theme, “Africa in One Country,” says it all - cultural variety, pageantry, panoramic scenery, and wildlife in its natural habitat. Serendipity brings a pleasant surprise around every corner, from Mount Cameroon and the balmy beaches of Kribi and Limbe, to Waza National Park and Lake Chad in the far north, on the doorstep of Africa’s Great Sahara desert. Cameroon is the home of colorful festivals year round. The Ngondo Festival in Douala, Cameroon’s largest city, is held annually for ten days, ending on the first Sunday in December. In the photo (left) two tribal experts collect and read a message from the water spirits. The scene opposite features a 65 man dugout race canoe, 30m in length. The canoe portrayed is the winning entrant from 2005. The smaller dugout carries divers, about to descend into the Wouri river waers to retrieve a message from the spirits. The spirit message, after being interpreted by the experts, is then delivered to a group of chieftains from Douala and area, sitting under a special canopy.

The Ngoun Festival is held every second year in December. The Sultan-King of Bamoun is sitting on his ornate throne, framed by huge elephant tusks. On the page opposite (lower row) the guard’s shield features a double headed serpent, which depicts the kingdom’s continuing vigilance in keeping its enemies at bay in a two front war. The next photo is of local officials in their colorful regalia. The final photo shows the guards and guests in line with the Bamoun palace in the background.

The 1970s saw the metamorphosis of Gabon, with a rapid economic growth driven by oil production and the export of manga and timber that propelled the country onto the world economic stage. Gabon's government recognized the need for a flag carrier as essential to the continued national development. Air Gabon was to become a reality. "The creation of Air Gabon," announced Gabon's President El Hadj Omar Bongo, "directly contributes to..."
Gabon: West Central Africa

by Muguette Goufrani

As part of my decade living on Africa’s West Coast, our family spent a memorable year in the Republic of Gabon, which hugs the Atlantic, straddles the equator and is roughly the size of France.

Being health fanatics and outdoor types, my mother Suzanne, brother Jean Pierre and I thrived in the hot, humid climate - and in 12 months, managed to visit much of the countryside. This gave us an intimate connection with the Gabonaise culture and was valuable in my future career in tourism. We enjoyed a laid back, tropical lifestyle; food was delicious and varied, the shops and stalls were full of interesting items and tempting snacks. What’s more, to our delight, the traditional West African culture had in no way disappeared with the oil boom.

Thanks to mineral wealth and a relatively low population growth, Gabon is better off financially than most of Africa. This fact is reflected in their care and attention to basic ecological concerns. For example, the vast coastal wetlands and marshes, are still largely intact. This is something with which ATA members will heartily agree, the Association being a strong advocate of ecotourism. Gabon, which hosted the Africa Travel Association (ATA) International Congress in 1980, is easily accessible from the USA and Canada.

A lively and charming capital, Libreville, reminds me of a quieter, more laid back 50s version of Miami Beach, with its large ocean-view hotels. To name a few, there’s the Hotel Mont-Bouet, the Ebene, Rendema Meridien, Novotel’s Rapontchombo, Hotel Okoume Palace Inter-Continental, Hotel Mont de Crystal and Hotel Gamba. Libreville’s chalk white buildings contrast dramatically with the dappled green shades of the nearby equatorial forest.

Getting around in Gabon: The country’s national carrier, AIR GABON is the national carrier of the Republic of Gabon. We are proud to be in the vanguard of African airlines that provide a wide-ranging international and domestic flight network, soaring across continents with the most up-to-date fleet, equipment, and highest caliber of services.

We make it easy to fly not only within Africa, but between Africa and Europe and the Middle East. Travelers coming to Africa from the United States can make easy connections to AIR GABON in Paris, London or Rome.

Nearly 85 percent of Gabon’s terrain is composed of dense tropical forest, making ground travel quite difficult. Until the Transgabon Railway opened in 1983, AIR GABON was the sole viable means of linking the provinces. Along with the railway, we have contributed to the development and unification of the country, while continuing to be “The Best Solution” for getting around Gabon.

Other attractions: These include the Mussulo Peninsula with its three islets, the largest of which is called the Island of Priest. Further south, tourists can visit the Slavery Museum, housed at the site where slaves were kept while waiting to be taken to Brazil in the Americas. The Kwanza River mouth nearby is a beautiful spot for picnics and fishing.

Kuando Kubango Province, situated in the far southeastern area of Angola, bordering Zambia and Namibia, it is the country’s second largest province. Blessed with two great rivers, the Kuando and the Kubango, the province forms the gateway to the rest of southern Africa and certainly has tremendous potential to become the hub for cross-border trade and tourism opportunities. The climate is pleasantly tropical and dry and the land is rich in many untapped resources such as timber, diamonds, gold and copper.

Namibe Province: Bordered by the Atlantic Ocean to the west and Namibia to the south, this province is the land of the Welwitschia mirabilis, an astonishing desert plant that resembles a giant octopus! This plant, which spans 2m to 3m in diameter, is unique to the region and is carnivorous! The Namib Desert itself offers excellent hunting and attracts game hunters from southern Africa and overseas. With the third largest port in the country, Namibe Province is one of the main centers of fishing.

The province also has very beautiful beaches, with facilities for water sports and other activities. One of the most attractive spots is Bibala Beach, where the water is said to have healing properties. Kwanza Norte, which is well known for its mighty rivers, it is covered by dense tropical forest in the north and savannah in the south. The Capanda Dam, situated in the middle of the Kwanza River, is a hydro-electric power source and one of the largest civil engineering projects in the country.
Kwanza Sul Province, which is bordered by the Bengo, Kwanza Norte and Malange Provinces in the north, Brie to the east, Benguela and Huambo to the south and the Atlantic Ocean to the west. The main tourist attractions in the province include the waterfalls, thermal springs and caves. The port, Porto Amboim, is the major access by sea.

Lunda Norte and Lunda Sul: this province is famous for its art and vast reserves of diamonds and was once part of a powerful ancient kingdom known as Tchokwe. The kingdom straddled what are now northeast Angola and the southwestern part of the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Today, Tchokwe sculptures are still popular with art collectors; one of the most famous being O Pensador, a graceful sculpture of a philosopher resting his head in his hands. Benguela Province, whose main attraction is the city of Benguela, known locally as Crimson Acacia. The province has superb beaches, including Kaota, Katotinga, Baia, Azul and Baia Farta. Scuba diving and deep sea fishing are very popular pastimes.

Huambo Province, with its stunning colonial style buildings has long been the center of Angolan history. This province has a pleasant climate and rich, fertile soil that lends itself to much cultivation.

Zaire Province, along with its neighboring province of Uige, Zaire was once part of the Kongo Kingdom. The heartland of the kingdom encompassed Mbanza Kongo, the present day capital of the province. The royal court was based in the town, which was the center for trade and other political and economic activities. The province has vast offshore oil reserves and plays host to a large number of oil companies. The place where the Congo River meets the sea is one of the most moving sights in the country and a trip to the “Point” will take one to the site where the great explorer, Sir Henry Morton Stanley started his historic trip into the heart of Africa in search of the famous Dr. David Livingstone.

Cabinda Province: The Cabindans have a very rich cultural tradition and still practice Bantu rituals, such as initiation ceremonies. The province’s most impressive attraction is the Maiombe Forest, which is especially famous for its butterflies. There are hundreds of species of butterflies to be found in the forest, many of which are unique to the area. Prized by collectors, specimens of these butterflies can be found in natural history museums throughout the world.

Travel Details:
The climate in Angola varies depending on the altitude. The dry season is between May and October with the rain beginning from November and December until April. The warmest months are September and October, while July and August are the coolest. Lightweight casual wear is appropriate throughout the year, although jackets and jerseys are advisable for the evenings as it can get cold at night. Rainwear is definitely recommended during the rainy season. It is generally advisable to consult with your health care practitioner for precautionary measures against tropical disease before traveling to Angola. Medication against malaria is strongly recommended and it is also advisable to have a yellow fever vaccination.

The local currency is the Kwanza (Kzr) which is named after one of the larger rivers in Angola and U.S. dollars are widely accepted. Visas are required for American citizens and all visitors must have a valid passport and proof of return tickets. While most European airlines provide transport to Angola you should always consult with your travel agent for specific travel and tourism assistance as many hotels have recently undergone refurbishments in Luanda.

For more information about visiting Angola, please contact the Embassy of Angola in Washington, D.C. at telephone: (202) 785-1156 or facsimile at (202) 822-9049 and the mailing address is 2108 Sixteenth Street, Washington, D.C. 20090. You can also visit the following website: http://www.angola.org.

In addition, local arts and crafts can be purchased in many marketplaces in Angola. Items made from ebony, rosewood, straw, malachite, bronze and pottery are all available. A wide variety of wooden masks and traditional instruments such as marimbas kissanges, xingufos, ankle rattles and drums can also be purchased.

Interesting places to visit

Luanda the capital city of Angola, which was founded in 1575 by the Portuguese explorer Paulo Dias de Novais, retains its heritage as a Portuguese colonial city and there are several interesting buildings of historical significance and a number of churches that date back to the 17th century. Luanda is divided into two parts, the “baxia,” or old part and the “cidade alta,” or new part.

One of the city’s most famous landmarks is the Armed Forces Museum, which is housed in the St. Miguel Fort. The National Bank of Angola building, a large pink colonial building overlooking the palm fringed bay, which is another example of the legacy of Portuguese architecture as is the Kinaxixi market building. Ilha de Luanda, originally an island, has been joined to the mainland by a causeway. There, one will find many discotheques, bars and casinos, as well as restaurants where national dishes such as palm oil beans, fish calulu, dried meat, corn funge, chicken muamba and mufete de cacuso (tilapia) faroża can be truly savored.

MEET THE “BEST OF AFRICA” IN 5 U.S. CITIES AT THE

Seattle’s Washington State Convention Center
Africa Travel Magazine editors and ATA Chapter members continued their support of the Adventures in Travel Expos, this time in the heart of downtown Seattle, September 13 to 14, 2008. Our magazine editors were a top attraction at the ATA booth, which anchored the Africa Section. Supported by the Seattle Times, the Adventures in Travel Expo targeted one of America’s largest, most affluent markets, famous as the home of industry giants Boeing Aircraft Company and Microsoft. The area is America’s gateway to Asia Pacific markets, Alaska and Western Canada. We expect more North American travelers to consider the Pacific route to Africa, with connections in China and Japan when planning future trips.

2009 Series Starts Early
The 2009 series begins in January with Adventures in Travel Expos in New York and Chicago, followed by Los Angeles, Washington, DC and the next Seattle event. “Seattle represents a market that research shows will be very receptive to our show - an exciting arena filled with a wealth of interactive exhibits from around the globe. We look forward to experiencing the same success as we have in other markets,” said John Golicz, CEO Unicomm LLC.

Powerful media support
Part of this success can be attributed to the quality of media partners that the company has assembled over the years, such as the Los Angeles Times, New York Post, Chicago Tribune, and National Geographic. Unicomm is an independent business-to-business communications company specializing in originating and managing world-class trade shows and conferences. Located in Milford, Connecticut, Unicomm is led by a seasoned management team possessing over 50 years of events industry experience and an impressive track record of dozens of successful show launches and hundreds of event productions.

WASHINGTON, D.C. The recent inauguration of President Barack Obama is more than a landmark in America’s political history, it is also an opportunity for the travel and tourism industry to take a more focused approach to increasing visitors and investment in Africa from the U.S. “All over Africa, we can see how excited everyone is about President Obama’s connection to the continent,” said Edward Bergman, ATA Executive Director. “We have already seen a surge in interest about travel specials to Africa not only to Kenya, where President Obama traces his roots, but also throughout East Africa.”

Surge of Interest
ATA, the world’s leading global travel trade organization, is gearing up for its Second Annual U.S.-Africa Tourism Seminar in Washington, D.C. from February 19-20, immediately prior to the Adventures in Travel Expo (ATE). The seminar’s timing and location affords ATA an opportunity to build on the recent historic events, including President Obama’s commitment to service. With travel to Africa on the rise and an emerging interest in Africa as a culture and heritage destination, Africa is garnering more and more attention from American tourists as one of the world’s premier travel destinations.

Sports, Adventure, Diaspora
Focusing on sports, adventure and diaspora travel and tourism, the seminar will showcase Africa as a top tourism destination from the U.S., as well as a site for investment and business opportunity in one of the world’s fastest growing tourism markets. Manute Bol, former NBA star and Ethiopian Airlines official spokesperson, will speak about different possibilities for responsible tourism and sports tourism in Africa.

Stephen Hayes, President of the Corporate Council on Africa, and Edward Bergman, among other travel professionals, will speak about tourism policy choices at the opening plenary session.

Sthu Zungu, President of South African Tourism-USA, will speak about travel trends, relating to who is traveling to Africa, why they are going, and what can be improved on the travel front to increase tourism to the continent. Alongside experts in sports tourism in Africa, she will also address how mega sporting events, such as 2010 Soccer World Cup in South Africa, can be leveraged to increase tourism to and within Africa.

Greater Responsibility
The timely topic of responsible tourism and how the industry and the individual tourist can make a difference in local communities will be explored by senior representatives from the Center for Ecotourism and Sustainable Development, Africare, and the African Wildlife Foundation. Senior representatives from the World Bank, IFC (International Finance Corporation), and US Department of Commerce’s Office of Travel and Tourism Industries, will explore entrepreneurship, finance and investment opportunities, as well as travel trends in separate workshops.

SAA Workshop
South African Airways representatives will participate in a workshop on the growth and modernization of travel to Africa and the growth and modernization of intra-Africa air service. Representatives from other airlines serving Africa and Boeing will also participate in the seminar.

Another workshop on African diaspora tourism will examine the role of the diaspora in changing perceptions of Africa in the US market and emerging African diaspora tourism products, such as cultural and heritage tours. Panelists will also explore how the African diaspora and immigrant communities can serve as Africa’s tourism ambassadors in the U.S. tourism markets.

Branding Africa
Panelists will also speak about branding and marketing Destination Africa and Africa’s newest travel products, particularly in the areas of sports tourism, and adventure travel.

Tourism experts and industry professionals from the U.S. and Africa, particularly travel agents and tour operators who market, sell and specialize in Africa, are expected to attend the seminar, as well as ministers of tourism, representatives from Washington D.C.’s diplomatic community, and Africa’s national tourism offices.

African American Family
Representatives of the Spring Bank, Virginia Quanders family (1684), referred to as ‘America’s oldest documented African American family’ by Ebony and Jet magazines, will attend the event. Henderson Travel Services, the first African American travel agency in the U.S. to specialize in sending visitors to Africa, will also participate. Public relations firms specializing in marketing Africa destinations, such as the Bradford Group, will participate in the seminar, alongside faculty and students from George Washington University. ATA welcomes travel industry professionals to participate in the ATE expo immediately following the seminar. ATA members should contact ATA for discounts to exhibit.

About the Africa Travel Association (ATA). Central African Republic offers Pristine Parks, Wilderness Safaris
by Muguette Goufrani

Among my journeys throughout the length and breadth of this vast continent, the Central African Republic provided an opportunity for me to experience something beyond the ordinary. This relatively new nation is roughly the size of France, with geographical features that include Savannah plains, mountain ranges, dense rain forests and many rivers. Back in late 1800s, the French Colonial powers named this country ‘ Ubangui-Shari, ‘ and focused on making it an agricultural resource with vast cotton, coffee and tobacco plantations. All of this was in the government’s plans, despite the country’s disadvantage of being a landlocked nation.

Working in Tahiti at the time, I flew direct from the Pacific to Bangul the capital, just in time to witness the crowning of a new Emperor. This stately figure, an African named Jean Bedel Bocassa, fashioned himself after his hero, Napoleon I of France. It was a lavish ceremony, financed and organized by the French Government. Like many African leaders, Bocassa was also a great admirer of late Emperor Haile Selaisie of Ethiopia, whose palace and private railway coaches we visited in 2000.

Everything you may have read about this equatorial area for years in National Geographic or in countless books about Africa is right here. Without a doubt, the Central African Republic (CAR) has some of the world’s most pristine parks. Pygmies guide you through virgin woodlands that are the domain of forest elephants and rare lowland gorillas. The dense rainforests literally ‘explode’ as the tropical sky fills with colorful, exotic butterflies - and out on the sweeping plains you can encounter elephants, lions, leopards, rhinos, and a host of other species found nowhere else. My brother Jean Pierre and I visited the Dzanga-Sangha Reserve, which has perhaps the highest densities of lowland gorillas and elephant anywhere in Africa.

Altitude and rainfall help to moderate the temperature and vegetation is thicker, with many varieties of flowering tropical plants flourishing in the rainforests. Most people have a connection to the land even if they live in a city, and my European girl friend and I had a chance to visit their farms during the harvest. Despite their poverty, they opened a bottle of champagne to welcome us. What great hospitality! While French is the official language, Sango is the national tongue.

Enjoy the National Parks
My favorite game viewing area is St. Floris and the Bangui-Bangoran parks, which are known for protecting elephants, lions, leopards and Rhinos - as well as buffaloes, hippos, monkeys, giraffes, baboons, cheetahs and crocodiles. The town and cities have bustling markets. You will find beer, plus palm and banana wine for sale by the side of the road, with green hills and giraffes close by. Bangui, the capital, is a charming administrative district, and there’s enough attractions to keep you going for several days. The French founded the city in 1880, naming it after the nearby rapids. The old section features wide, -shaded boulevards and a central market area where all public transports converge. I will continue this feature in a later edition, and will provide some photos of the area at that time. Au Revoir.
